Not applicable

10. A commentary at the date of the announcement of the significant trends and competitive conditions of the industry in which the group operates and any known factors or events that may affect the group in the next reporting period and the next 12 months.

Oil prices have increased over the past year as result of steady draws on global oil inventories. In addition to sustained inventory draws, prices increased after the October 4 announcement by OPEC+ that the group would keep current production targets unchanged. However, concerns remain over how stable the recovery in global demand will be with uncertain COVID-19. The increase in economic activity and easing of the COVID-19 related restrictions have contributed to rising energy use and prices.

(Registered in the Kingdom of Thailand) (Company Registration No. 0107550000017)

Brent crude oil averaged USD 74/b in September 2021, up USD 4/b from August, and USD 34/b higher than in September of last year. Brent spot prices have risen from their September average to more than USD 80/b in early October. As per EIA, Brent prices will remain near current levels for the remainder of 2021, averaging USD 81/b during the fourth quarter of 2021, which is USD10/b higher than our previous forecast. The higher forecast reflects expectation that global oil inventories will fall at a faster rate than previously expected owing largely to lower global oil supply in late 2021 across a range of producers. In 2022, EIA expects that growth in production from OPEC+, U.S. tight oil, and other non-OPEC countries will outpace slowing growth in global oil consumption and contribute to Brent prices declining from current levels to an annual average of USD72/b. This healthy price level will have a very positive impact on Subsea Business.

Global economy is expected to grow 5.9% in 2021, and 4.9% in 2022. This recovery is expected to open various opportunities in Subsea and flexible lay space. We are strategically aligning the Group to benefit from these upcoming potentially massive business opportunities.

Pent-up demand and capacity constraints, whether in the supply chain or labour markets, are feeding concerns about rising inflation. In some countries, these pressures have already prompted Central Banks to tighten policy. The key question remains the tolerance of major Central Banks (Fed, ECB, BOJ, BOE) to tolerate an uptick of inflationary pressure. Currently, those pressures are seen as transitory, but if the labour market has limited slack because of low labour participation, then an inflationary wage-spiral may develop and prompt and more aggressive tightening. We will monitor inflationary pressures closely to position ourselves in the best possible way to counter concerns about rising inflation.

The outlook for subsea service providers remains very positive on a medium to longer term basis. Capital investments by oil exporting nations is expected to continue, and these are core markets to Mermaid. The shift towards natural gas and renewable sources of energy outside of Europe are expected to provide an increase in the number of work opportunities for the group, as well as to soak up tonnage in the intermediate space.

An increase in total number of global projects, both in renewables and traditional Oil and Gas, is keeping the active vessel fleet occupied. This should support utilization, and is expected to continue supporting rate levels over the longer term. Incremental increases are already a fact, and this is expected to continue for the intermediate term.
